In recent years, the Brown School at Washington University has experienced dramatic growth in students, faculty members, and research. To ensure the School remains at the forefront of social work and public health education, research, policy, and practice, we have undertaken an expansion project that includes the addition of a new building and strategic renovation of existing facilities. By providing much-needed space for innovative programs and community engagement, the project will enhance our impact the region, the nation, and the world.

Project Fast Facts

- The new 105,000-square-foot building will more than double the Brown School’s footprint on Washington University’s Danforth Campus.
- The design promotes collaboration and aligns with the Brown School’s values of health and wellness, diversity, energy efficiency, and environmental sustainability.
- The expansion will provide essential administrative space on the Danforth Campus for the university’s Institute for Public Health.
Expansion Highlights

- The Forum – A dramatic 3,300-square-foot multiuse public space on the main level of the new building facing the University’s iconic Brookings Hall. The Forum will host large conferences, professional development workshops, Brown School and University events, and community programs.

- Research Space – More than 20,000 square feet of space for research centers and programs

- Instruction Space – Seven new highly flexible classrooms, bringing the School’s total to 17. The project also will add two larger classrooms for University-wide use.

- Student Space – Eight new group study rooms with access to the latest technology and numerous breakout spaces dispersed throughout the Brown School complex

- Faculty Space – 68 faculty offices across Brown Hall, Goldfarb Hall, and the new building

- Social Space – More than 3,000 square feet of space designed to promote faculty, staff, and student interaction and collaboration

- Meeting Space – Five new meeting rooms available for use by faculty, staff, students, and community organizations

- Dining – A new full-service café

FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

Investing in the Brown School

A number of naming opportunities are available to recognize gifts that support the Brown School’s expansion. Areas that can be named include classrooms, meeting rooms, research suites, and exterior spaces. Gifts of $2,500 and more will be acknowledged on the donor wall in the new building.
