OUR NAMES, OUR STORIES*
9:45 a.m. – 11:30 a.m.

Please refer to your WashU email account for a calendar invitation with your specific Zoom call. If any issues arise, please email brown-orientation@email.wustl.edu

We come to the Brown School with different experiences, motivations, and passions that drive our work. We also come with unique stories. This activity will integrate opportunities for sharing your story and learning the stories of your peers.

Faculty and staff will facilitate an activity geared towards reflection and discussion on self, identity, and community. Through sharing our names and stories and exploring themes of diversity, equity, and inclusion, we will participate in creating a learning community that supports discourse, intentional relationship building while providing a baseline for social change.

Please refer to the Pre-Orientation Canvas module, called Our Names, Our Stories, to learn how to create your presentation prior to this session.

*Inspired by the wisdom of the first African-American dean at Washington University, James McLeod, who taught that we should know each other by name and story.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS:
BETHANY JOHNSON JAVOIS, MSW ‘02
2:00 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.
CLICK HERE TO JOIN | Passcode: 795081

This engaging and motivating keynote address provides an opportunity for incoming students to learn about how a Brown School alumna launched her professional journey using the knowledge, skills and resources gained through her Brown School experience.

Bethany Johnson-Javois is the CEO of the St. Louis Integrated Health Network (IHN), a $1.5 million nonprofit that serves the region’s safety net health care providers and the local community. IHN promotes the mission of providing quality, affordable, and accessible care to all, with an emphasis on serving the underserved.

Notably, Johnson-Javois was named the managing director and Commissioner Ex-Officio for the Ferguson Commission. The Ferguson Commission, an independent, volunteer group appointed by former Missouri Governor Jay Nixon, was charged with addressing the underlying root causes that led to unrest in the wake of Michael Brown’s death. After a comprehensive study that included extensive community engagement, the Commission published an unflinching report of its findings, generating 189 calls to action that chart a new path toward healing and positive change for the residents of the St. Louis region.

Johnson-Javois’ leadership has garnered notable recognition including the 2016 Silver Bell Award from Mental Health America and St. Louis Children’s Hospital 2015 Community Advocate of the Year. She also received the Access to Equal Justice Award from the Washington University School of Law’s Clinical Education Program. While she managed the St. Louis Regional Health Commission’s initiative on access to behavioral health, the Commission received the Outstanding Civic Leader Award from the National Alliance on Mental Illness and gained national recognition as a model of state/local collaboration. In 2018, she was inducted into the Gamma Sigma chapter of the Delta Omega Honor Society in Public Health.

Johnson-Javois currently serves on the board of trustees of the Deaconess Foundation, and she is a board member of the Missouri Foundation for Health and a member of the Executive Advisory Council for Missouri State University College of Business. As a licensed Evangelist Missionary in the Church of God in Christ, she is a noted motivational speaker, trainer, and facilitator around spiritual and leadership development.

Johnson-Javois, a Danforth Urban Fellow, graduated from the Brown School in 2002 and was honored with a Brown School Distinguished Alumni Award in 2014.
